Increased Use of FBI Facilities Foreseen by Two Police Officials

WASHINGTON, March 27. (INS) —Two Hawaiian police officers to-day foresee a closer coordination of federal and territorial law enforcement activities as the result of their studies at the FBI national academy.

The two officers, who have just completed a 12 week course at the academy, are Anthony R. Paul, assistant chief, Hawaii county police department, and Lt. Ronald H. Barringer, of the Honolulu police department.

They are the first officers from Hawaii to train at the FBI school, which has offered courses to qualified men from state and territorial police departments since 1935.

The course includes training in police organization and administration, traffic control, investigative techniques, operation of police laboratories, fingerprint identification and firearms.

The Hawaiian officers agreed that their introduction to scientific crime detection methods practiced at the FBI laboratory was one of the most important features of the course.

Pointing out that the laboratory facilities are available to help local police forces in crime solution, Lt. Barringer said he expects the Hawaiian department would seek an increasing amount of FBI aid where local laboratory facilities are not adequate.

Lt. Barringer was elected secretary-treasurer of the current academy class. In addition to taking the regular classes, he specialized in photography and firearms.

When he returns to Hawaii, he plans to aid in organizing law enforcement courses for the men in his department.

Paul also intends to use his FBI training to intensify his work as head of the county police school. He said he will solicit the aid of the Honolulu FBI field office, court and law enforcement officials to strengthen his program.

Sgamelluri Becomes First Guamanian To Graduate FBI National Academy

Lt. Adolfo C. Sgamelluri, 38, who became the first Guamanian to graduate from the FBI National Academy in Washington, D. C., has returned to his post as head of the Guam Police Criminal Investigation Department.

Lieutenant Sgamelluri left Guam in December, 1949, after being selected to attend the FBI school with 62 others from all over the U. S. He graduated in March, 1950 and returned to Guam last week.

He is the sixth man from west of the continental United States to graduate from the Academy. The other five are from Hawaii.

Lieutenant Sgamelluri, who is a veteran Guam Policeman of 17 years, said, "it was rugged" when asked about the school.

He said he received extensive training in firing all types of fire-arms—including sub-machine guns, tear gas guns, pistol, and rifles. Other parts of the training included investigation work, regular police duties, police science, jurisprudence, records and filing, and the art of self defense.

Chief of Police Antonio Baza said the sending of Guam police to the Academy will become a regular event. He said, "As long as they continue to accept our men, we will continue to send them." He did not indicate who will go next. "That's up to Commissioner Frost," he said.

Chief Liu Gives FBI Graduation Address

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A meeting with Honolulu's soft-spoken police chief, Dan Liu, can be either pleasant or downright painful. It depends on which side of the law a person is on.

Liu, a veteran of 26-years in police work graduated yesterday from the FBI National Academy, the nation's foremost training school for law enforcement officers.

HE WAS the first official from Hawaii to be voted president of his class, one of the highest honors accorded an academy student. Liu was picked unanimously by 86 fellow officers from 39 states attending the intensive 12-week training course.

IN A SPEECH Liu told the graduating class—

"The integrity of our profession can be maintained only by promoting the concept of equal and exact justice to all men . . . protecting the weak, the uncertain and the innocent . . . and protecting lives and property."

He also promised graduates would "continue to battle relentlessly the continuing menaces of crime and Communism."

OTHER KEYNOTE speakers were Preston J. Moore, National Commander of the American Legion and Richard Cardinal Cushing, Archbishop of Boston.

By disposition, Liu leans toward quiet discussions of weeks specializing in police science and administration, subjects on which he is one of the country's recognized experts. But as classmates in his Judo class already know, he is one administrator who can take care of himself in a back alley brawl.

HE MISSED only one class in "self defense" during the session and that because of a bad cold.

During the first ten weeks at the academy Liu studied such "basic" subjects as criminal law, identification, applied psychology and biology. He spent the last two administration and scientific aids in crime detection.

HE ALSO PUT in dozens of hours sharpening up his shooting eye at the FBI range in nearby Quantico, Va. This included teaching himself to shoot left handed, a talent he figured might come in handy some day.

Homework ranged from mastering complex chemical tests to the workings of a submachine gun.

As for social life at the Academy Liu says, "There is none."

"IT GOT SO even if I wanted a haircut I'd have to arrange it in my own schedule well in advance," he said.

Liu, who left for Honolulu last night admitted the Academy course is very tough. At 50, he was at the maximum age acceptable to the academy. But he said he had no trouble keeping up with the "youngsters" in his class.

LIU BELIEVES Honolulu's crime picture is about the same as in any mainland city of similar size. The biggest headache, aside from the mounting traffic problem, is burglary.

"Hawaiians are just trusting souls—they leave their doors unlocked," he said. Frankly, he added, he hopes they start locking them.

$1,500 Scholarship

Kauai, Maui men going to FBI Academy

Kauai police Chief Ed Crowell will send Lieutenant Abraham H. Waiamau to attend the 73th Session of the FBI National Academy beginning August 15.

Sergeant Philibert L. Viera of Maui also will attend this session.

Waiamau will be the fourth recipient of a $1,500 scholarship furnished as a public service by the board of directors of the Honolulu Star-Bulletin for travel and living expenses in connection with the training at the academy.

Waiamau, 37, born in Koloa, Kauai, is a graduate of the Kamehameha Schools in Honolulu and served in the Army from 1951 to 1953.

He has been a member of the Kauai Police Department since April 1, 1950, except for his military service.

The FBI National Academy, keeping in mind that law enforcement is an individual community responsibility, was established to train a professional corps of career officers as executives, administrators and instructors for the advancement of police agencies on all levels.

The National Academy curriculum covers a 12-week period and includes such subjects as criminal law, public speaking, police record systems, defensive tactics, fingerprint identification, photography, surveillances, and other phases of police administration.

Officers attending the academy are not expected to become an expert in each of the areas covered but are expected to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the many aspects of the problems and investigative techniques available.

The officers can then go back home and impart to their fellow officers the most up-to-date methods of crime detection.

Ross Selected For FBI School

Honolulu Police Det. Edwin W. Ross, was named by Police Chief Dan Liu Thursday to attend the FBI National Academy's 79th session starting March 20.

Ross, 30, has been a member of the Honolulu Police Department since June, 1957. He was graduated last September from the University of Hawaii. He has been a motorcycle sergeant in recent years.

The FBI National Academy curriculum is a 12-week session covering criminal law, public speaking, police record systems, defensive tactics and other phases of police administration.

KL: Can you tell us about the first retainer that the Hawai'i Chapter conducted?

ER: It was at the Ilikai and . . . Chin Ho is the one that funded most of it. He in fact gave us fantastic prices for the (conference). Because we were paying most of it (conference), was being paid from out of our own pocket. The department (HPD) would not pay for us attending the retainer. So I ended up being the spokesman to talk to the manager of the Ilikai to get . . . the prices down because it was all coming out of our own pockets.

Chin Ho threw in the Ali Ali Kai for (boat) cruises, beer cruise and everything. It was fantastic.

FBI academy at Quantico will offer enlarged facilities in 1972.

FBI Academy teaches latest police techniques

When Kauai police detective William K. Kauai attends the FBI National Academy at Quantico, Va., next month, he will become the sixteenth Hawaii police officer to do so.

This year's 86th session, which begins Aug. 10, also marks the 35th anniversary of the law enforcement training academy, whose graduates include Honolulu Police Chief Francis A. Keala and Hawaii Police Chief Ernest J. Fergerstrom.

All four Hawaii police departments have several other officers who are graduates of the academy.

THE TUITION-FREE school, which conducted its first classes on July 29, 1935, was founded by Director J. Edgar Hoover on the belief that crime can be better combatted if cooperating agencies are equipped with effective techniques and modern strategy.

Over the years, the academy has been influential in the professionalization of law enforcement and in advising wider use of improved, safer techniques.

To date, the FBI Academy has graduated 5,734 officers, including 185 persons from 41 foreign countries. Some officers from Guam, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Canal Zone have also studied there.

Some 28 per cent of those still active in law enforcement currently hold top executive positions in City, State and Federal agencies.

In addition, 58 colleges and universities now grant academic credit to students who complete FBI Academy training.

Classes, held twice a year for 12 weeks at Quantico and FBI Headquarters in Washington, D.C., are generally patterned after basic training for special agents.

Courses include police management, human relations, defensive tactics, criminal law, public speaking, physical and behavioral sciences in law enforcement, and police records.

A PROSPECTIVE student is nominated by the head of his department and should intend to make law enforcement a career. He must be in good health and have devoted five continuous years to law enforcement.

The FBI pays travel expenses to and from Washington, D.C., everyday expenses and provides all necessary equipment.

At the session's end, officers make recommendations on curriculum, so that subjects taught change with public needs but are selected based on police experience.

NATIONAL Academy Associates chapters have been organized by graduates to conduct annual retraining sessions. The FBI national academy staff also holds sectional retraining classes each year at one of four national sections.

By 1972, enlarged facilities at Quantico will enable the academy to train 10 times as many officers each year. It also expects to be able to offer short, specialized courses to an additional 1,000 police officers.

OTHER LOCAL academy graduates include:

Honolulu Police Department — Capt. Orby R. Groves, Lt. Charles P. Fee and Lt. Edwin W. Ross.

Hawaii County Police Department — Deputy Chief Guy A. Paul, Capt. George Iranon and Capt. John K. White.

Maui County Police Department — Deputy Chief Philibert L. Vierra, Lt. Steven W. Kakaio, Lt. Kikuji Omura and Dect. Abel S. Cravalho.

Kauai County Police Department — Capt. Raymond P. Duvauchelle, Capt. Abraham H. Waiamau and Sgt. William L.F. Huddy.

Interest by Hawaii police chiefs in recommending their outstanding officers to the academy reflects "the highly professional stature" of the local police agencies. Richard D. Rogge, special agent in charge in Honolulu,

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE HAWAII CHAPTER, FBI NATIONAL ACADEMY
ASSOCIATES:

It is always a pleasure to greet fellow law enforcement officers. It is an additional pleasure when those officers are FBINA Associates. The fraternal feeling which derives from a common experience, increased understanding of each other's problems, mutual respect and professional dedication is both unique and genuine. It is a unifying force which welds the separate branches of law enforcement solidly together.

We have a mutual duty to maintain that fraternal quality. As enlargement of the Academy's facilities opens extensive training to increasing numbers of law enforcement officers, we want you to know that there will be no relaxation in admission requirements or selection standards. We ask you, in recommending officers as prospective students, to insure that only those who maintain the highest standards of personal and professional conduct be considered. We depend upon you to help us preserve the prestige which this institution earned under its great founder, John Edgar Hoover, and to make that concept of excellence which was the symbol of his character the hallmark of our FBINA work.

I believe in Retraining Sessions such as this. I believe in them not only because they help to develop technical proficiency, but also because, in the lonely profession of law enforcement, they help to renew the spirit which holds us to our duty.

I count it a privilege to assure you that, as in the past, it is the FBI's desire to assist you in all matters of mutual interest. My associates join me in extending our best wishes for a profitable Retraining Session.

FBI meet on Kauai

LIHUE — The Hawaii chapter of the FBI National Academy Associates is holding its annual meeting on Kauai this weekend.

It is a combination get-together and study session.

Members of the organization are police officers throughout the Islands who have been to the FBI National Academy for training.

The session began Thursday with a lecture on dealing with crises. The session, an FBI official said, is emphasizing the handling of domestic disputes.

The members of the Hawaii chapter — most of them officers in the police departments of the four counties — also are updating what they learned at the academy. The information will be passed on to other policemen after the session is over, the official said.

First graduates from Micronesia

FBI graduates

Law enforcement officers from Micronesia and the Northern Mariana Islands were among the 250 officers to graduate from the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Academy in Quantico, Va.

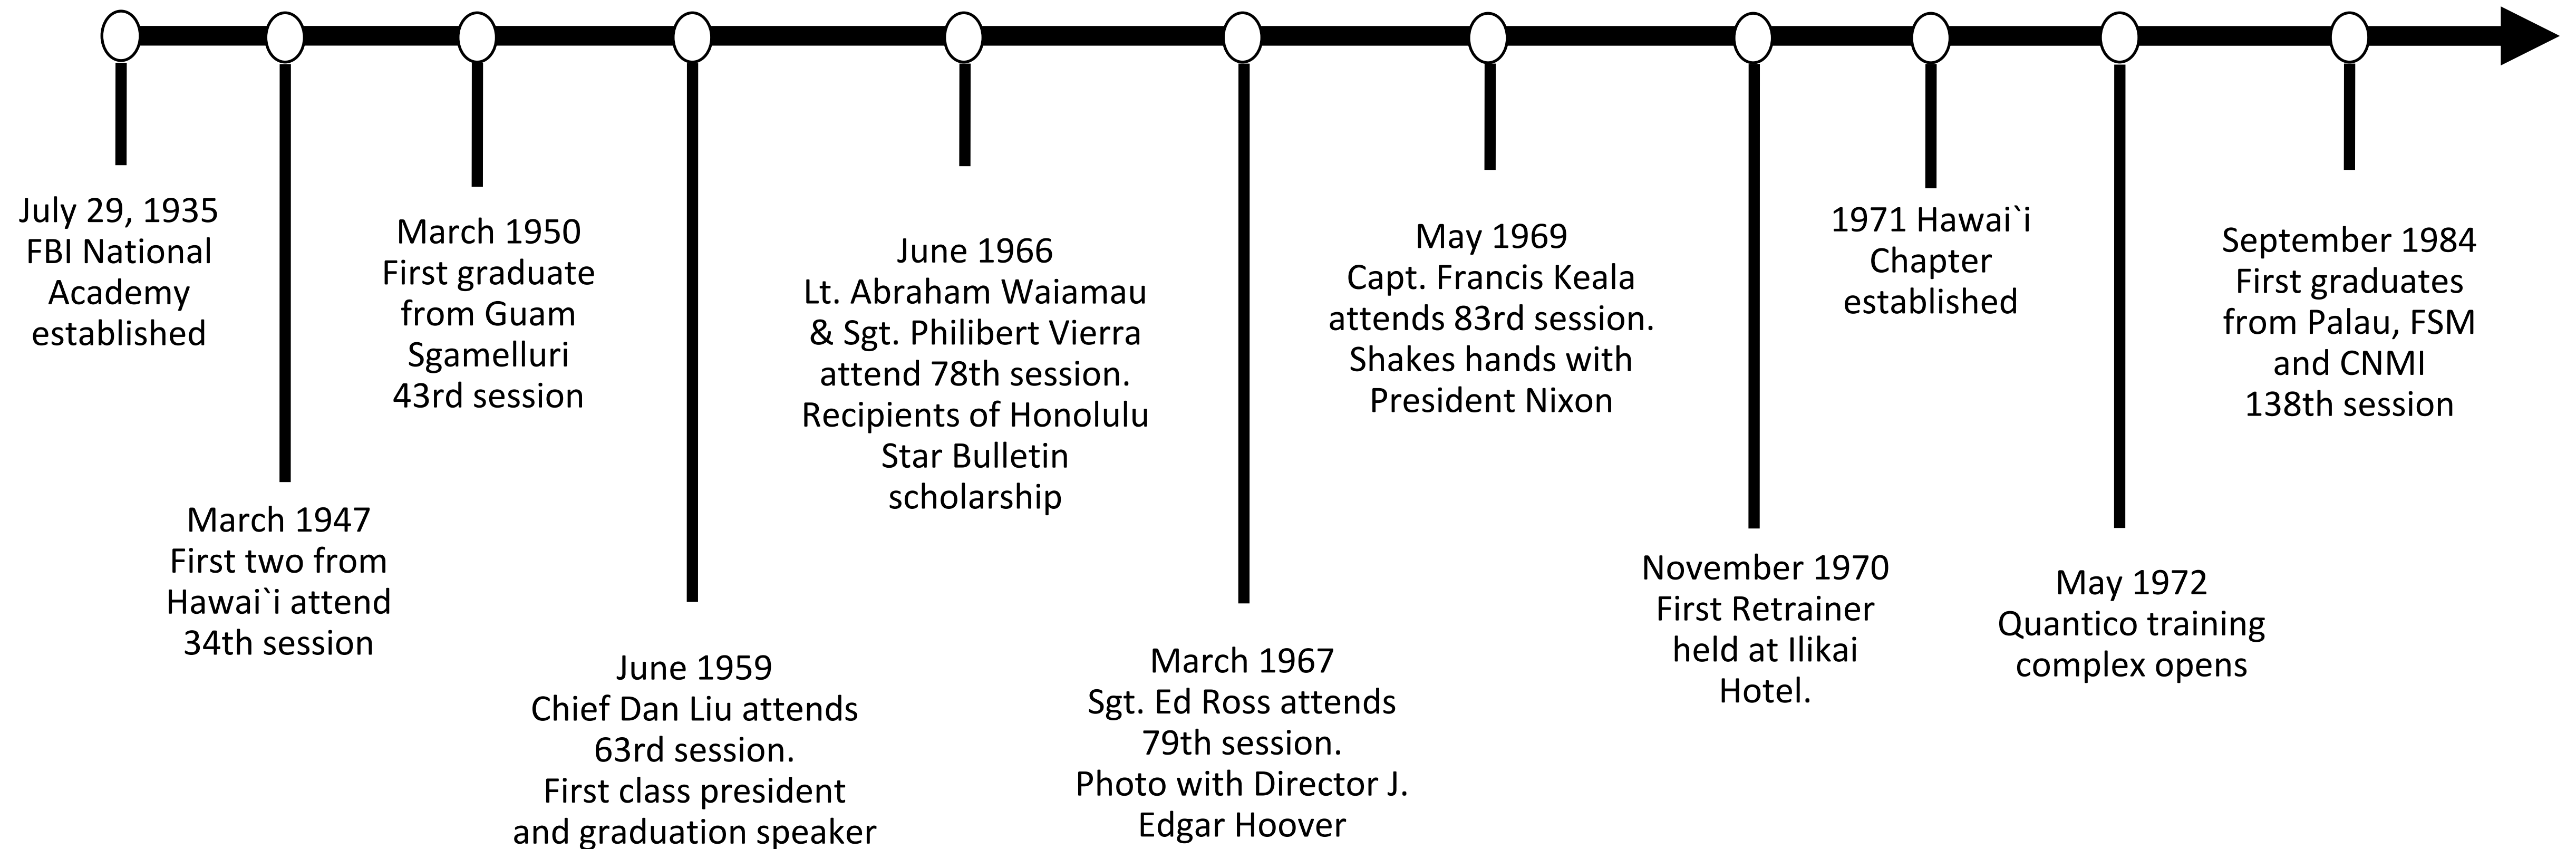

This is the first time in history of the FBI National Academy officers from Micronesia were among the graduates, according to an FBI news release.

Graduates were Kaoru Brell, director of Department of Public Safety from Koror, Republic of Palau; Jack J. Jack, deputy chief of the Division of Security and Investigation, Officer of the Attorney General, Federated States of Micronesia in Kolonia, Ponape; Berney J. Martin, detective for the Ponape Police Department in Kolonia, Ponape; Liyab Mirey, chief of police for the Division of Public Safety, Federated States of Micronesia in Yap; Joseph H. Race, chief for the Division of Security and Investigation, Office of the Attorney General, Federated States of Micronesia in Kolonia, Ponape; Antonio A. Reyes, detective lieutenant for Saipan's Department of Public Safety, Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas; Kerson Chiwi Rizal, captain for the Department of Public Safety, Federated States of Micronesia in Moen, Truk; Eona L. Simon, detective lieutenant for the Marshall Islands Police Department, Republic of Marshall Islands; and Capt. William O. Tosie, Kosrae State, Federated States of Micronesia.

These individuals join more than 70 other active FBI National Academy graduates in the Hawaii Chapter, which covers the Pacific Basin of Guam, Saipan, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands and American Samoa.
